White Dew is the fifteenth solar term in the traditional Chinese calendar, usually occurring between September 7th and 9th each year. It signifies the gradual cooling of the weather, larger temperature differences between morning and night, and the frequent appearance of dew. The air carries a sense of freshness, reminding people to keep warm.

During this period, sending a warm greeting can brighten someone's day. Whether on social media or via text, short messages can express care for family, friends, and loved ones.

Daily greeting examples (100-200 words):

"White Dew has arrived, mornings and evenings are cooler. Remember to wear extra layers and stay warm. Good morning! May your day be bright and fresh like the morning dew.”

Love messages (100–200 words):

“White Dew is here, morning dew sparkling like my longing for you. May every day bring you peace and joy, as warm as the autumn sunlight that fills my heart.”

White Dew reminds us of seasonal changes and teaches us to cherish our relationships. Messages shared on social media or in texts need not be long—short and sincere words bring warmth and care.

In this season, choose different styles of messages for different recipients. Daily greetings emphasize care, friendship messages convey camaraderie, and love messages express romance and longing. During White Dew, a short message can spread warmth to every heart.
